SELF DISCIPLINE

Masterminds like you have the incredible ability to see the future! You see the possibilities, the dangers, and all the options in between. You never run out of ideas or energy, you love learning new things, and mundane tasks drive you crazy. But sometimes people misunderstand your vision and call you idealistic, unrealistic, or even distracted. Perhaps you’ve even been accused of [or diagnosed with] ADD or ADHD.

As far back as you can remember, you’ve struggled with discipline. Keeping consistent with your workout, your diet, your career, and even your education has always been hard. After all, it gets boring to do the same thing over and over again! So people call you unreliable; call you a flake; they tell you to focus or ‘get serious.’ But your problem isn’t discipline at all...

To turn your weakness into an advantage, realize that your talent to see into the future means you have a powerful connection to the present. You can see big changes in future outcomes based on small changes right now. Discipline is the practice of doing the same thing regardless of the outcome. That isn’t efficient, and you know it! Instead, put your energy into being consistent – doing one small thing today that sets you up for big success tomorrow. Masterminds like you are rare, born with the ability to master outcomes others can’t even see. But it takes a little bit of training to master your own brain.
